Introduction to the Bicentenary Fine Art Exhibition

Among several suggestions as to ways of celebrating the College Bicentenary, an exhibition of works of art donated by our Fellows and Members was one of the first to be agreed by Council.

Painting, sculpture, drawing and photography have long been pastimes of many members of the surgical profession. Some colleagues have reached very high levels of attainment and one-man shows in professional galleries are not unknown.

This Bicentenary Fine Art Exhibition shows well the remarkable talent among our members and I know will be enjoyed by everyone who attends.

It is a particular delight that His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales, Honorary FRCS, has agreed to exhibit one of his watercolours.

On behalf of the Council of the College, I warmly welcome you to the exhibition which will give great pleasure to all.

Barry Jackson
President of The Royal College of Surgeons
